The Latin Sexual Vocabulary by J. N. Adams, 1982: Guide with Definitions by Ann Mullaney, July 6, 2024. For adults only.

J. N. Adams (1943-2021) examined the expressions speakers and writers used to communicate about bodily functions during the first thousand years for which we have recorded Latin (roughly 500 BCE to 500 CE). His work was encyclopedic: a team of dedicated scholars cataloguing Adams's books and articles have identified no less than 2,800 quotations from ancient texts in just this one modest-looking volume, The Latin Sexual Vocabulary. For help tracking down these citations see the Index locorum, in Combined indices to works of J. N. Adams currently found at https://reading.academia.edu/EleanorDickey/JN-Adams-indices.

Here you will find first the Table of Contents from Adams's book with live links to sections below. Next, about 70 pages of a sort of map for navigating Adam's findings. I intend this guide to be useful for scholars of texts written not only in Latin but in its many off-shoots as well. Italian Renaissance authors in particular expanded on Latin sexual terminology to produce an elaborate erotic lexicon, which French scholar Jean Toscan decoded in his four volume dissertation Le carnaval du langage: le lexique érotique des poètes de l'équivoque de Burchiello à Marino, Lille: Presses Universitaires, (1978) 1981, and see my Jean Toscan, Table of Contents in English on academia.edu. The remaining 70 or so pages are alphabetical indexes to the words and subjects presented, together with a bit of bibliographical information.

Asterisks after words are those words not attested; asterisks before words are those Adams did not add to his indexes but which I have drawn from his text; terms are in bold the first time they appear. My abbreviations are meant to be obvious: for noun genders: M, F, N and C (common, usually M/F), DIM for a diminutive form, ALT for an alternate spelling; DEP deponent verb, PP, past participle, ADJ COMP, comparative adjective form, etc. I have omitted some standard forms: for first conjugation verbs (-are), for some genitive noun forms. For converting Greek letters to Latin, https://www.lexilogos.com/keyboard/greek_conversion.htm. Errors are mine and translations too (with help from many sources) unless otherwise specified.

Preface	vii
The book describes and classifies the vocabulary used to refer to sexual body parts, sexual acts, and excretion; language choices illuminate conventions of genre and the

Abbreviations [Placed at the end of my document.]	ix
I. INTRODUCTION	1
I.1. Some types of sexual and excretory language	1
 basic obscenities: direct and obscene terms for sexual parts of the body with no other primary meaning; not usable in polite conversation 	1
• there are reflexes of Latin obscenities in Romance languages: a reflex is the known derivative of an earlier form, which may be either attested or reconstructed	2
• some terms are more offensive than others, like mentula , cunnus , culus , futuo , pedico and irrumo seemed worse than coleus , fello , ceueo and criso : terms discussed below; for culus , pp. 110-17 see also "Culus, Clunes and Their Synonyms in Latin," J. N. Adams, Glotta , 59 (1981), pp. 231-64, https://www.jstor.org/stable/40266557	2
 metaphors and euphemistic designations provide the majority of terms; most sexual metaphors seem to be ad hoc coinages; tone and implication of metaphors vary; metaphors fade 	2-3 most sexual euphemisms use indirect terms: metonymy (part for whole; adjoining part) 	3
• euphemism may involve omission of the term: 1) ellipse, 2) aposiopesis (an abrupt breaking-off, often indicated in print using an ellipsis) and 3) substitution: a pronoun (hoc , illud , aliquid) may stand in for an obscene or indelicate noun; a non-specific verb, like facio (to do, to make), may substitute for an obscene verb, see J. N. Adams, "A type of sexual euphemism in Latin," Phoenix 35 (1981), pp. 120ff.	3
I.2. Some functions of sexual language in Latin	4
I.2. (i) Apotropaic and ritual obscenity: warding off evil, ritual shouts; phallic representations: bulla ; obscene insults: maledicta , probra ; malediucta pronounced at the planting of herbs obscene gestures: fica , corna , digitus impudicus	4
I.2. (ii) Aggression and humiliation	6
I.2. (iii) Humor and outrageousness: "sexual language may have a humorous purpose": verba praetextata veiled or disguised words; ioci : jokes, jests; nequitia : lewdness	6
I.2. (iv) Titillation: stress laid on the importance of words as an accompaniment to intercourse, carmina iocosa (Ovid Ars 3.796, Martial 11.60.7, 11.104.11, Juvenal 6.406)	7

II. MENTULA AND ITS SYNONYMS	9
II.1. Basic obscenities	9
II.1. (i) mentula F: male sexual organ	9-12
the anonymous writers(s) of the collection of 80-95 poems known as the Priapeia (c.	9 50-100 CE) openly use basic obscenities, like mentula and cunnus (female geintalia, see below pp. 79-81): Priapeia 29 Cicero in an oft quoted letter (Ad familiares 9.22) asserts the impropriety of referring	10 to menta (mint) by a diminutive suffix $(ment + ula)$ because, the implication is, mentula "non licet" (is not allowed)	10
Petronius, Catullus and others use an adjective in the feminine form and omit the	10 basic obscenity, example: rigida mea (my rigid with mentula (penis) understood), Corpus Inscriptionum Latinarum (abbreviated CIL) IV.760
Archilochus used some obscenities but also metaphors: κέρας F: horn; arm of river;	10-11 mountain peak; penis, μύκης M: mushroom, any knobbed round body; cap at end of	10-11 scabbard; penis; excrescence on trees, note 1 flagitatio, -onis F: a type of invective	11 mentula ('prick') used as an empty term of abuse, see J. N. Adams, 'Anatomical terms	11 used pars pro toto in Latin', PACA (Proceedings of African Classical Assoc.), Vol.
XVI, 1982, pp. 37-45
II.2 (ii) verpa F: penis; penis (as protruded from foreskin); erect penis	12-13
verpus M and ADJ: a circumcised man, circumcised	13
ψωλή circumcised, ψωλός M: circumcised penis	13
fututio , F: noun formed from verb futuo, futuere , futui, fututus: to have sexual	13 relations, typically referring to a male and a female verpa used pars pro toto (part for the whole) to indicate a pedicator or irrumator	13
pedicator , -oris M: sodomite, one who performs anal intercourse	13-14
pedico, pedicare: to perform anal intercourse	13-14
pedicatio , -onis F: the action of sodomy	13-14
irrumator , -oris M: one who is fellated; vile person	13-14 irrumo, irrumare : force receptive male oral sex; treat in shameful manner; abuse;	13-14 defile
irrumatio , -onis F: irrumation, the active penetration of a mouth with a penis	13-14
urtica F: stinging-nettle and veprecula, F: thorn-bush: seen as phallic-like objects	14 that inflict pain (on someone pooping on a bush)
II.2. Metaphors	14
II.2. (i) Sharp or pointed instruments virga F: rod; mentula virga salax ~ lewd prick	14 14-15

$\dot{\rho}$ άβδος M: rod, penis; virga is a calque on $\dot{\rho}$ άβδος: a calque "is a word or phrase horrowed from another language by literal word for word or root for root translation"	14-15 borrowed from another language by literal word-for-word or root-for-root translation"	15 radius virilis: virile 'rod'/ penis: radius M: rod, ray	15
vectis, vectis M: crowbar, lever	15
χάραξ M: pointed stake, *caraculum, reconstructed Vulgar Latin word, a little stake, Spanish carajo ; caracium an ALT form, note 1	16 περικαθῆσθαι to embrace; to mount, said of a female straddling a prone male πάσχω: suffer, feel an emotion, 190, ἔπασχον imperf.

Terence often used metonymy, and may omit an indelicate verb; Plautus used sexual metaphors; Adams list 7 categories from which euphemisms are drawn: (a) 'violence,	218-219 corruption', (b) 'touch', (c) 'be with', (d) 'lie with', (e) 'take (give) pleasure', (f) 'take', (g) 'press close' Plautus used sexual metaphors, anatomical: aratiuncula, cucumis, fundus, gladius, inferior guttur, machaera, peculium, radix, saltus, testis, uagina, uas; cf. rutabulum in Naevius, and verbal: aro, dirumpo, diuido, inforo, scando, tero, 'marry'	219 farce and mime used primary obscenities, and metaphors: caedo, concido, cuspis, dolo, molo, ramus, scalpo, scindo, strutheum, terminus, trua	219

VI.2. (ii) Catullus and epigram	219
In Greek elegy, figurative terminology preferred to obscenities; an exception, ξενοκυσθαπάτη F: composed word: ξενο-: strange/ new and κύσθος female genitalia, coined by Nicarchus (1st cent)	219
the use of sexual vocabulary by the following authors briefly reviewed: Catullus, Martial, the (unknown) author of the Priapeia , Ausonius	219-220
VI.2. (iii) Satire	221
recap of the use of sexual vocabulary by Horace, Lucilius, Juvenal, Persius	221-222
VI.2. (iv) Oratory	222
Orators and rhetoricians (Cicero, Quintilian, Pseudo-Quintilian, Seneca) advised avoidance of obscenity and affected modest silence, which was disingenuous, "the speeches of Cicero are full of references to sexual practices, unnatural and otherwise"	222
intemperantia N pl.: a euphemism for sexual organs, akin to unmentionables, note 2	222 men could speak more freely with members of their own social class; ordinary people expected greater reserve to be shown by leaders	223
Seneca's use of officium, loci, libido and obscena reviewed	223
in oratory sexual acts were alluded by means of innuendo, circumlocutions and euphemisms, many examples reviewed	223
VI.2. (v) Elegy	224
Alexandrian elegy was likely euphemistic; [Callimachus (c. 310 – c. 240 BCE), the most famous proponent of this style, inspired Catullus, Horace, Ovid and others]	224
review of Ovid's terminology for body parts	224
other elegists' sexual vocabulary reviewed; "metaphors which focus attention on the role of the mentula are avoided," so the metaphors seen in Latin elegy, "often paralleled in Greek," are "anatomically inexplicit": wrestling, rowing, riding, etc.	224-225
but cf. example of officium from Propertius 2.22a.24: percontere licet: saepe est experta puella/valere officium tota nocte meum (you may inquire: often a girl has experienced my "duty" holding strong all night long)	225
VI.3. Chronological variation	225

sexual explicitness that is permitted changes from period to period	225
"That there were no public restrictions on verbal obscenity under the Empire is	225 evidenced by the case of epigram."
euphemisms lose their euphemistic character; they may be dropped or live on as obscenities; words once coarse may reappear as recherché	226
metaphors change frequently but the underlying symbolism which prompts individual	227 metaphors persists: for example weapons and farm implements for penis Latin, like Greek, lacked standard polite technical/ medical terminology for body	227 parts; genitale, pl. genitalia for both sexes gave way to verenda and veretrum for penis, see 52-3 above; and later (4-5 th century CE), veretrum was used also for the female sex organ; the commonly used sinus muliebris , female lap, vagina, was a translation of κόλπος γυναικείος, see 90-1
VI.4. The influence of Greek	229
	228
As suggested above, p. 202, perversions are often ascribed to foreigners and may be	228 referred to with foreign words: Latin words for homosexual practices used Greek terms: pedico, pathicus, cinaedus, catamitus ("from Greek Γανυμήδης/ Ganymede via Etruscan"), malacus, from μαλακός ADJ: tender; effeminate, passive sexual partner discussion of calques and loan words for body parts by Aulus Cornelius Celsus (c. 25	228-229
BCE– c. 50 CE) and other writers, which have been treated above	220-229
Latin sexual metaphors overlap Greek counterparts, and there were imitations: hortus	229
(garden) = $culus$ (buttocks, anus) likely coined from $\kappa \tilde{\eta} \pi \sigma \zeta$ (garden; female genitals) =	22) κύσθος M, female genitalia; this conjunction of terms is a bit clearer in Adams,
detailed discussion of some of the terms in the spurcum additamentum to the	229-230 Metamorphoses by Apuleius, 73, 187; orcis/ orchis, from ὄρχις M: testicle; ovary; pyga, from πυγή 75, buttocks; scrotum; cephalum from κέφαλος? or κεφαλή F:
head; most important part; extremity; inguen, 47 = mentula, 9; Priapus, 16-17 = mentula; [for the text of this passage and an analysis of relevant scholarship, see "Apuleius and the 'spurcum additamentum" by Vincent Hunink, Lectiones

APPENDIX: THE VOCABULARY RELATING TO BODILY FUNCTIONS	231
App. 1.Defecation
App. 1. (i) Caco and its derivatives	231 caco, cacare: defecate; defecate upon; defile with excrement cacaturio , cacaturire,,: to feel the need to defecate; -turio is a desiderative	231 suffix which expresses a desire to do the act denoted by the root verb additional forms in graffiti: cacator M: one who poops, and what may be cacatris F	231
venire cacatum, graffiti: cacaturiero veniam cacatum (when I want to poop I'll come and poop), CIL IV.5242	232
Plautus used creat where cacat might have been expected	232

derivative words point to mildness of the term, a plant name citocacia because it causes rapid (citus) voiding	232
concaco, concacare: soil, pollute, defile, make foul (with excrement/ ordure/ dung)	232
App. 1. (ii) Merda	233
merda F: dung, excrement; rubbish, filth; dross (merda ferri : iron dross); may derive from roots *smerd-, *smord-; used for the excrement of birds and other animals	233
σκωρία F: dross of metal, slag; merda	234
(σ)μ ερδαλέον , smerdalea, Priapeia 68.8, cf. σμερδαλέος ADJ: fearsome; terrible to look upon/ hear	234
App. 1. (iii) Stercus, fimus	234
fimus M: dung, excrement	234
stercus filth, manure, excrement, 172	234
stercus and fimus considered the polite equivalents of merda, a table p. 234 shows a count of these terms in the extant texts of 20 some authors	234 derivatives of fimus in late antiquity: fimare, fimarium, fimita/femita, fimorare, fimorarium	235 derivatives of stercus in Latin: stercoratio, stercorare, stercilinum, stercorarius	235
Adams concludes that stercus was a generic term for excrement (of humans, birds and quadrupeds), while fimus was initially a more specific term for ox or cow dung; ADD&COR: gallum in suo sterquilino plurimum posse (a cock can yield great power on his own dung pile), Seneca, Apocolocyntosis 7.5; * sterquilinium N: dung heap/hill/pit, manure pile; midden	236-237
Cicero objected to someone being called stercus curiae , the excrement of the senate, De Orat. 3.164	237

Corpus Inscriptionum Latinarum (CIL)

Theodor Mommsen (1817-1903) did not just get the idea to collect all known Latin inscriptions, he got other scholars to join him in painstakingly collecting some 180,000 inscriptions and publishing them in huge volumes which now are available for downloading.

CIL XIV: Inscriptiones Latii veteris Latinae. Ed. H. Dessau. 1887 (impr. iter. 1968). Top half of p. 379.
